

Food additive legislation update

Seminar date: Thursday 25 March 2010

Additives legislation is changing - new controls are being introduced with varying transition periods over the next few years. Businesses producing and/or using additives need to be thinking now about how these new controls will impact on their operations.

A simplified and common approval system for food additives, flavourings and enzymes, based on the scientific opinions from EFSA, is being introduced, along with new harmonised EU-wide rules on food enzymes, replacing previously divergent national legislation. There are clearer rules on maximum levels of undesirable substances in flavourings and stricter conditions are also being introduced for the use of the term 'Natural'. And, of course, there are the developments with the labelling of the so-called 'Southampton' colours.

The seminar will include overview of the new controls from Glynis Griffiths and James Ridsdale of the Food Standards Agency.

It is aimed at those in the food industry who deal with product development, technical management and quality assurance, as well as those involved in the manufacture of food additives, and in regulatory affairs and enforcement.

Exhibition space:

There will be a limited amount of exhibition space available in the refreshment area for companies promoting products or services allied to the seminar theme. Space is available on a 'first come, first served' basis and must be accompanied by a delegate registration at the appropriate rate. Site access from 8.00am on 25 March.

NB: Please make your own insurance arrangements

Cost for exhibition space:
